OREGON ROSES
The World's Finest

"We Grow Our Own"

ALL OF OUR ROSES ARE TWO YEARS OLD
FIELD GROWN, TOP NUMBER ONE GRADE

DORMANT ROSES

NOVEMBER 1952 — MARCH 1953

To Our Customers...

Again, we must say—Place your orders early! Due to Winter weather conditions, there will be a national shortage of roses the next two years.

All orders are paid in full in advance, and shipped out in the order they were received, as soon as the new crop is dug in November. If you live in localities of extreme cold and cannot plant at that time, please state when you wish shipment in the Spring. (March 1st, March 15th, or April 1st.) Your individual order is held until that time.

We never substitute without the customer's consent. It is helpful to us in filling orders, if several substitute selections are stated.

OUR POLICY

We guarantee all of our plants to be true to name specified and that they will reach their destination in good condition. Any plant that you do not consider to be in good condition MUST BE RETURNED WITHIN 5 DAYS! Once a plant has been planted, care, weather and environment will determine how it grows. We make absolutely no guarantee that plants will continue to live.

—The Portland Rose Nursery

For The Record...

We are proud to announce that our roses were rated as second in the nation among all retail rose growers in 1950.

Unknown to us, our roses were mailed to other states to unidentified investigators of the International Nursery Survey Committee.

Of a possible rating of 10.0, ours were rated 9.25.

This is a challenge and a noteworthy reward for our constant endeavor to supply merchandise of the highest quality.

Cultural Suggestions

Anyone can grow roses. There have been so many instructions on the planting and care of roses that many amateurs hesitate to begin a rose garden. The important things in choosing your location are good drainage, at least half a day of full sun, and protection from very strong winds.

It is advisable to spade the bed in advance to a depth of at least 18 inches. Well rotted cow manure is very good for spading in at this time, or this may be applied away from the roots when planting. It is also fine for a top fertilizer in early Spring.

When you receive your roses, completely unwrap them and immerse in a bucket of water until planted. If you cannot plant immediately, bury them in moist soil for a few days. But plant them as soon as possible.

Roses should be planted at least two feet apart. Dig a large enough hole so the roots spread out completely. Prune any broken roots. A cone of dirt in the center of the hole is very important, so the roots fit down naturally over it. The bud union, from where the branches start, should be just below ground level. It is best to run water in the hole as you fill in the dirt. There MUST NOT be any air pockets left around the roots or the rose will die. Water again several days later so the ground will settle firmly.

Heaping the soil up around newly planted roses to a depth of 4 to 6 inches will help retain the moisture and is also good Winter protection. Rake this away when growth starts.

Our roses are pruned for Fall planting. They should be cut back further in Spring after danger of freezing is past, while still dormant. Pruning back every Spring to 6 inches, or anywhere up to 10 inches, will bring fine roses much sooner.

During the growing season it is best to water the ground under the roses, rather than sprinkle the foliage.

Roses are susceptible to bugs and diseases. A Dormant Spray should be applied twice in the Winter. A combination spray for bugs and diseases should be used every ten days thru the Summer. Good, reputable, especially prepared rose sprays are available at any nursery, supply store.

Bush Roses . . .

DESCRIPTIVE STYLE. It is impossible to be precise with definite descriptions of roses. Color will vary according to climate and soil, and any rose grower knows that each blooming brings a more intense, or lighter, shade according to degree of sunlight. Also, perfection of bloom is dependent on the weather.

Nearly every rose is fragrant. But not always in hot climates, nor during hot, humid weather.

Abundance of bloom depends much on care and fertilization. Constant pruning back after each blooming will bring quicker and greater rewards.

Again, growth depends on care and fertilizer. Correct pruning will properly shape each bush. Varieties do grow different heights. The lower, medium growers have been designated as of "moderate growth," above average growers as "vigorous medium," then the "tall vigorous" growers.
